

MA in Philosophy & Public Affairs

(One Year Full Time or Two Years Part Time)

Introduction

The Masters of Arts in Philosophy and Public Affairs is a one-year interdisciplinary programme (or two years part-time), designed to offer graduates of either philosophy or the social sciences (politics, economics, history) the opportunity to study some of the many areas of overlap between the disciplines, and especially to explore foundational questions in public policy formulation. The innovative programme mixes the abstract and the applied, with half the modules from the School of Philosophy, and half from existing MA modules offered by the School of Politics and International Relations, the School of Social Policy, Social Work and Social Justice.

Our MA in Philosophy and Public Affairs programme is aimed at students who wish to deepen their knowledge of the core areas of philosophy and its application to public affairs at graduate level. It is also intended to provide a good foundation of graduate work for students who wish to continue to more advanced graduate research. It aims to provide an integration of social and political theory with the philosophical implications of the area.

Programme Highlight

The School of Philosophy encourages our students to be critical philosophical thinkers with the ability to reflect on current philosophical debates, history of philosophical thought and add their own contribution. We aim to provide a learning environment that fosters collegiality and a pluralistic approach to the main areas of philosophy and encourages students to engage critically with questions.

Graduate Profile

Ruth Hurley

MA Philosophy and Public Affairs 2020/2021

The Masters of Arts in Philosophy and Public Affairs offers a freedom to explore interdisciplinary subjects of interest and identify how each subject plays a role in your understanding of the world. As a graduate with a wide set of interests this flexibility allowed me to focus on how one's public engagement in society is inextricably linked to our private sphere of family and morality and how the individual enters civic life with both a private understanding of oneself and how society perceives them. Since graduating, I now work on community-based, innovative European Union funded projects that promote the community's future in employment with the Ballymun Job Centre Co-op Ltd. The dynamic approach this course offers, by using both theoretical and practical insights, has no doubt influenced my ability to work in the field of Career Guidance and Community Development.

Applicant Profile

- Applicants should normally have a primary degree in philosophy or one of the core subjects of the programme.
- A Second Class Honours Grade One (2:1) or higher is required but Second Class Honours Grade Two (2:2) standard or equivalent may be considered on a case-by-case basis.
- Applicants may be required to attend for interview either via Zoom or in person.
- Fluency in English is a requirement. Candidates who have not completed their primary (bachelor's) degrees with English as the language of instruction will need to satisfy the University College Dublin's English Language Requirements.
